Question

Is the requirement for a Lane Departure Warning System (LDWS) under Item 29 of the Technical Specifications mandatory, or can it be waived?

Answer

The request has been carefully reviewed. It has been determined that the requirement for a Lane Departure Warning System (LDWS), as specified in the Technical Specifications, is justified and consistent with the operational requirements of the Contracting Authority. The Technical Specifications have been established to ensure that the vehicle provides an appropriate level of safety, reliability, and functionality under all anticipated operating conditions, including travel on both public roads and off-road terrain. Therefore, the requirement for a Lane Departure Warning System (LDWS) remains mandatory, and the Technical Specifications shall remain unchanged.
